Heretics Of Dune (Dune Chronicles)

Synopsis

Heretics of Dune, the fifth installment in Frank Herbert's classic sci-fi series. On Arrakis, now called Rakis, known to legend as Dune, ten times ten centuries have passed. The planet is becoming desert again. The Lost Ones are returning home from the far reaches of space. The great sandworms are dying, and the Bene Gesserit and the Bene Tleilax struggle to direct the future of Dune. The children of Dune's children awaken as from a dream, wielding the new power of a heresy called love.

A Mad Man in the best sense. This book wasn't as captivating as the the first 3 Dune books, and God Emperor did drag on for a bit as did this book. But once you get to know the new characters and, of course the Duncan Idaho Dejour - the plot drew me in. I loved the Teg character and the witches take on a new life of their own as developing characters. The Dune Audio books have the best readers I've ever heard - the readers are distributed throughout the reading just enough to provide a refreshing change of voice now and then. For the die-hard Dune lovers that are debating whether or not to go on after God Emperor I'd say it's worth it. For those that thought they'd had enough after dredging through God Emperor - you may or may not want to end it there or read/listen to it again before moving on to this one.

I have read the Dune books many times. I always seem to go back to them. It is nice to listen in the car on trips.

Excellent reading .
